D. LAND USE AND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT (2 min)

As we engage in processes of bringing together our colleagues doing various work centering our Native and Indigenous communities, Seattle Colleges will pause on formally reading our Land Acknowledgements until we have convened the Seattle Colleges community-Indigenous Partnerships Roundtable discussion. We encourage the community to provide information from this update and invitation as a replacement of a formal land acknowledgement.

It’s critical to not have our Land Acknowledgements become just a token gesture. Land Acknowledgements are not meant to be static, scripted statements that every person must recite in exactly the same way. They are expressions of relationships we have with our tribal leaders and Native/Indigenous communities. Therefore, Seattle Colleges will spend this academic year 23’-24’ building tribal relationships with institutional actions. “Building relationships is about action,” said Lynn Palmanteer-Holder, director of Tribal Government Affairs for the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges. “These tribal relationships have to be real and authentic and have long-term reciprocal benefits.”

Our goal is to build tribal relationships with the original occupants and stewards of the lands where the Seattle Colleges gather: the traditional home of the Coast Salish people, the traditional home of all tribes and bands within the Duwamish, Suquamish, Tulalip, and Muckleshoot nations.
